Austin Business Journal* Names Richard P. Slaughter Associates Best Place to Work for Small Companies

AUSTIN – Richard P. Slaughter Associates, an Austin-based wealth management firm, captured the Austin Business Journal Best Places to Work 2008 award for Small Companies for the second time in four consecutive years of recognition as a finalist. Award winners were announced at the Best Places to Work pep rally and luncheon held at the Austin Hilton Hotel, June 26 and will be featured in a special section of the Austin Business Journal.

“We attribute our distinction as Best Place to Work to the appreciation our employees experience everyday. They hear it not only from management but more importantly from the clients they serve,” said Brooks Slaughter, CEO.

The Slaughter Associates culture is focused around teamwork and service by encouraging every employee to be an active participant in the success of all phases of the company. Everyone feels they played a part in each client success story.

“Embracing an enjoyable work environment encourages our employees to go that extra mile for our clients. And our clients reward us by telling their friends and family,” said Bob Tabor, Vice President.

Slaughter Associates joins St. David’s Healthcare and Alamo Title, who were honored as large and medium-size companies respectively. Honorees were selected from more than 140 nominations and 50 finalists. Companies were evaluated in the areas of: team effectiveness, retention risk, alignment of goals, trust in co-workers, individual contribution, manager effectiveness, trust in senior leaders, feeling valued, work engagement and people practices.

About Richard P. Slaughter Associates
